

Toilet Paper? Watch an ad!

warm up

BI

Click HERE to listen, and fill the gaps

Or copy the link: <https://youtube.com/shorts/z1mkg015qrw?si=-1BjQkTMMS3c0bxq>

Want some toilet paper? First, watch an ad. That's the rule in China. In public _____, you now have to scan a QR code and watch a _____ to get a piece of paper. Don't want to wait? Pay half a yuan, about 7 cents. And this isn't the first _____. Earlier, there were facial scanners and AI dispensers that limited _____ to once every 10 minutes. And if your phone battery dies, _____ walking around with a dirty behind.

Choose the funniest headline

ROLL SPONSORED BY ADS

AD-SUPPORTED ROLLS

THE AD YOU JUST CAN'T SKIP

WHEN NATURE CALLS

PAY-PER-WIPE

ROLLS FOR RENT

Can you think of your own headline?

Should public restrooms restrict toilet paper access through ads, payments, or technology?

+

-

Reduces Waste

Toilet paper is essential, not a luxury

Answer the questions

1. What was your first reaction to hearing that you must watch an ad to get toilet paper? Do you find this idea funny, frustrating, or innovative? Why?
2. Would you feel comfortable if facial recognition or QR tracking was used in public bathrooms?
3. Do you think it's fair to charge people (even a few cents) for toilet paper in public restrooms?
4. Should essentials like toilet paper always be free in public spaces, or is it reasonable to limit or monetize them?
5. How do you think people in your country would react if this system was introduced?
6. Which is worse: wasting too much toilet paper, or forcing people to watch ads before they can use it?

edienglish.com